Sydney CSC ... team of the future

I would like to congratulate Sydney CSC this season. To me they are the most exciting young team I have seen in many years of following the club. I firmly believe they will be the team of the future as these youngsters gain more experience. Well done to Manfred and the lads! How in the world rumours started about them being omitted, heaven knows! I would also like to ask why flag poles are banned at CCSL games and not when we support our wonderful Socceroos. I realise the riots between Sydney Olympic and Preston are to blame but why should other fans who love to support their team suffer because there was no security or, at least, not enough at that game. The rioting days, I believe, are gone. So let fans support clubs in the Aussie Spirit.

The rules are getting tougher on spectators as well. Before long we'll get banned for celebrating a goal! By the way, I love the magazine. It's just what soccer needs.

— Tommy Mijac, Fairfield, NSW

Editor: You hit the nail on the head with the flag poles. It's important we develop soccer as a family sport, somewhere mum and dad can take the kids without fear. If it means no flag poles to achieve this goal, then I'm all for it.

Soccer Australia ... more praise

First the good news! Soccer Australia is just what the game needs in Australia - a glossy, high quality publication. I read your opening editorial with interest, in particular Ettore Flacco's statement on Page 7 (November issue). "For 12 months a year ... will bring all the action of the Coca-Cola Soccer League and the world game into your home." Hopefully, I thought, the erratic publication schedule which undermined the old "Aussie Soccer" magazine would not befall this new publication. However, after your excellent November issue, I waited in vain for Soccer Australia in December. Finally the magazine reappeared in January as a December/January issue. But isn't Soccer Australia meant to be monthly? My fears were confirmed when the next issue arrived in March bearing a February/March banner. Sadly it appears after just one issue Soccer Australia is now just six issues a year which is very disappointing. Can Mr Flacco please explain why this has occurred? Finally, I would like to see articles similar to issue two's story on WA, looking at the possibility of teams from Canberra and Tasmania joining the CCSL. Could you also publish the results of all Socceroo matches, including the recent matches against European clubs. Finally, please reconsider publishing Soccer Australia monthly as originally stated.

— Stephen Muller, Pennington, SA, 5013

Editor: Producing a full colour magazine is not achievable in a week. It takes a lot of planning and time. We take your point, Stephen, but there were practical reasons for December/January and February/March issues. The first two-monthly issue was due to the summer holiday break. The second was because of the break in the CCSL due to the World Youth Championship. The April issue has been delayed slightly to take in the best action from the World Youth Championship.

MORWELL STADIUM CONCERN

I would like to strongly express my concern about the Morwell Falcons stadium situation.

What the Australian Soccer Federation is asking is unfair and very selfish. Falcons have gone to so much trouble to improve their facilities. Now the ASF wants a roof over the new grandstand, at an estimated cost of $600,000. Well I think that stinks. Why doesn't the Federation look at other grounds ... most haven't got roofs on their grandstands. Lay down the law to all the clubs, not just Falcons, who are expected to do so much in their first year. Falcons are still working on the grandstand, their next priority was to start on the car park. Everyone expected Falcons to only last one year in the CCSL. Well, tough luck! Falcons are not as bad as people up north thought they would be. So come on, give our Gippsland club a fair go. What do you want in our place, a New Zealand team?

— No.1 fan Morwell Falcons

Editor: I agree that Morwell Falcons have done very well in their first year. And I hope you enjoyed the special souvenir feature on the club in our April issue. But it's important that conditions for spectators continue to improve. We must support the ASF in its resolve to ensure fans get a better deal.

EDITORIAL

The Australian Soccer Federation took us all by surprise last month when it decided to extend the contracts of national coach Eddie Thomson and his assistant Les Scheinflug. No one would deny the dynamic duo deserves a huge pat on the back for coaching our various national teams to some incredible performances in recent seasons. The Coca-Cola Socceroos, the Coca-Cola Young Socceroos, the Coca-Cola Olyroos and the Coca-Cola Joeys have all done us proud on the world stage in the nineties. But I believe having the same pair at the helm of our four national teams until at least 1998 could be counter-productive. I am not denying the qualities of Thommo and Les. In fact, I would go so far as to say I doubt if there is a better team in Australia to handle the mammoth job of coaching four national teams, all of whom are successful. But none of these teams have yet won a major FIFA honor

and surely, with the greatest respect in the world, a coach's ability must be judged on the success of his teams. At Soccer Australia we congratulate Thommo and Les and wish them all the best achievements in the years to come. On a different note, I was delighted to hear next season's Coca-Cola Soccer League action will be watched in South-East Asia through the ABC's ATVI network. The agreement to broadcast to the 16 countries in the region was part of the settlement reached between the ABC and the ASF over the contract wrangle. Progress is great to see and a move into Asia is a move in the right direction.

Last but not least in this issue we bring you the official program of the CCSL Top Six Series. So sit back and enjoy the best soccer in Australia during the next month.

ASF looks into overseas transfers

Australian Soccer Federation Executive Director Ian Holmes has ordered an investigation into the transfer of Australian players overseas. The decision was prompted by the wrangle in England over the transfer of goalkeeper Mark Bosnich to Aston Villa from Sydney CSC in 1991. The English FA is presently conducted an full inquiry into the illegal involvement of agents in transfer deals. "The investigation here will take the form of a random audit on overseas transfers by Australian clubs and we may go back as far as 1985 when Jim Patikas went to Greece," Holmes said. Holmes said such an audit had never been carried out before. "If there's any discrepancy, the matter will be taken to the board of the ASF," he said.

Talia steps up

Another Australian-born goalkeeper is making progress in the English Premier League. Former AIS student and Sunshine George Cross junior Frank Talia, who Soccer Australia featured in "Playing for Keeps" last month, was on the bench for Blackburn Rovers just before Easter. Although Frank's opportunities have been limited at Blackburn through injury, it's obvious former Liverpool boss Kenny Dalglish thinks the young Aussie has a bright future.

Needless to say, all Aussie football fans have been over the moon with the recent performances of our various national teams on the world stage. Stunning success in the past two World Youth Championships, in the Barcelona Olympics, the under-17 World Cup and, hopefully, next year's World Cup in the USA will see Australia emerge from its developing nation status. Incredible stuff considering the part-time nature of our football and the huge competition from other major sports. Having been intimately involved with the game for 35 years - I played my first State League match for Canterbury in 1959 - I am amazed at how far we have come in such a relatively short time especially taking into account our isolation from the world and the lack of substantial backers for our world game. Various theories have been advanced as to how it has happened - all unfortunately fail to mention the three main reasons.

They are:-

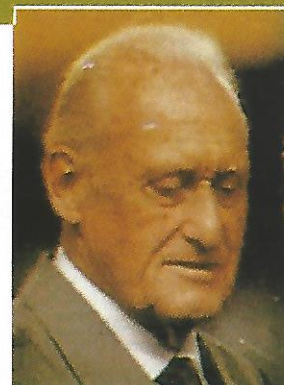

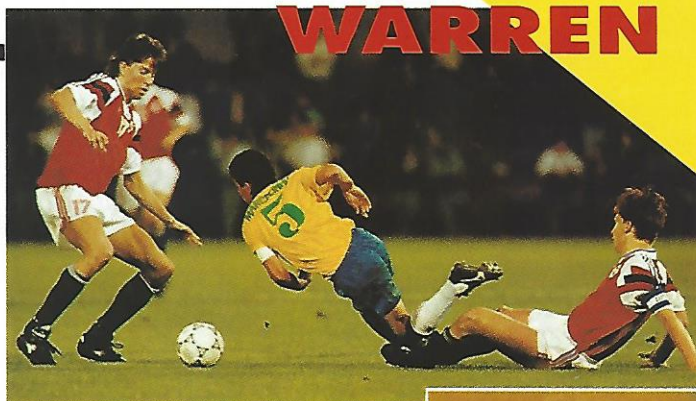

- The reign of Havelange as FIFA boss over the past two decades.
- The Coca-Cola Soccer League.
- SBS Television.

The 20-year reign of Havelange has been the major factor in the emergence of the "third world" footballing countries who are now set to tackle the superpowers of Europe and South America. Havelange's reign has seen the game promoted, financed, developed and educated in the four corners of the world providing us with world under age championships which have been the springboard for the "third world" to develop. It is no longer a surprise if the Africans, Oceanians, Asians, Middle Easterners, Central and North Americans match the Europeans and South Americans. The CCSL, where

and we are merely players

the best play the best each week, has been another major contributor to the development of our players. In praising the often maligned national competition for its role in the improvement of Australian fans, one must not forget the National Youth League and its contribution.

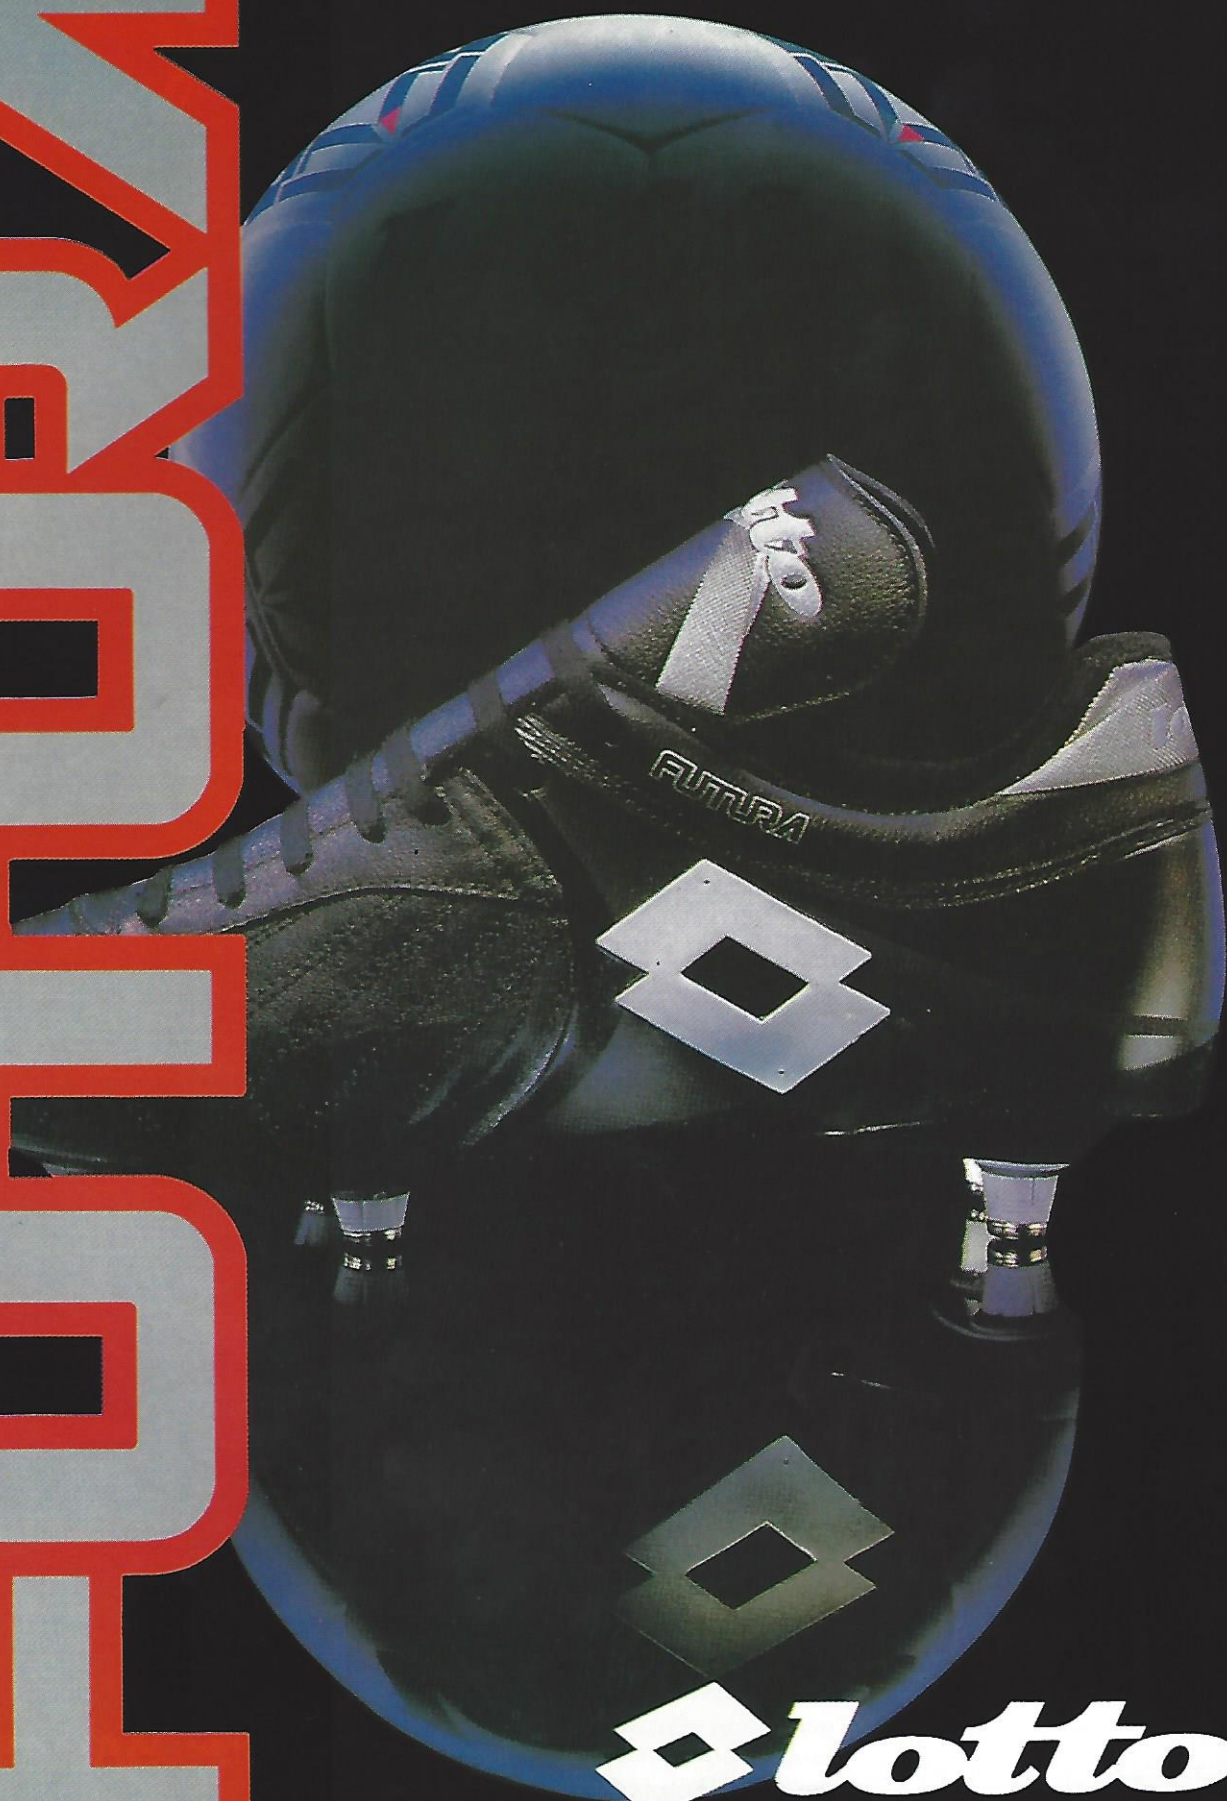

In the pre CCSL days, there were half a dozen tough matches a season. In today's CCSL there is no such thing as an easy game. And speaking of the CCSL, it is about time we acknowledged the standard of the matches produced by member clubs. The standard and role of the CCSL has been a major factor in providing a production line of young players.

Third, and certainly not least, is SBS Television. We are now seeing the first generation of players who have been brought up on SBS's world coverage of the game - European, South American,

World and European Cups ... SBS brings it to Australia. It has had a profound effect not just on young players' concepts of the game but has also educated and influenced the thinking of all coaches and spectators in this country. Prior to television, it was a trip to the movies to see a 20-second clip of Stanley Matthews playing in the FA Cup final. That was all the visual education we received. The next generation was brought up on the ABC's British Football. Today, if there is a ball kicked in any worthwhile world footballing event, SBS brings it to our kids. One last thought on our game's emergence. It has not happened overnight, it has evolved over the past three decades. Let's hope the trend continues and, in praising our new young stars, don't forget the role played by many pioneers in the past three decades.

CCSL TOP SIX CHAMPIONSHIP SERIES

It's CCSL finals time - the business end of the season when the big boys come out to play. GREG BLAKE looks at some of the facts and figures

The top clubs are buzzing with anticipation in the countdown to the play-offs with players and supporters able to think of little else.

The tempo at training is increased, club doctors work overtime to get injured players back on the park, coaches bark out their commands at training and there is a sense of urgency in the atmosphere.

The finals mean the best clubs pitted head-to-head over four nail-biting weeks.

The finals produce the biggest crowds, the colour and the glamour.

Over the series soccer fans will pack the terraces as hopes are made and broken and pressure is the name of the game. This is the showpiece of the season folks, a time to rejoice in this great game.

Finals football is here to stay.

A BRIEF HISTORY

Between 1977 and 1983 the finals had no bearing on the championship, with play-off games relegated to a post-season series of minor importance.

So slight was the interest in the play-offs that the CCSL didn't even bother to play the series in 1977, the league's inaugural year, 1981 and 1983.

The Top Four Cup, as it was known, was played in various formats in 1978, 1979, 1980 and 1982, with the 1980 series the only ill-fated year which captured the attention of the soccer-loving public.

That year the CCSL declared that the Top Four Cup would be granted an increased profile with the nationally televised grand final getting a permanent home at Canberra's Bruce Stadium.

Despite a 15,000 plus audience, which saw Heidelberg demolish Sydney City 4-0 in the final, that grand plan lasted just one year.

For the record, the other grand final winners in the non-championship days were Sydney City (Hakoah) in 1978 and

IT'S DOWN TO BUSINESS

CROWDS

Pre-1984, the best finals attendance by a long chalk was the 15,000 plus fans who saw the Sydney City - Heidelberg grand final at Canberra's Bruce Stadium.

Since 1984 the attendance records (discounting games as part of double-headers) are -

ELIMINATION FINAL: 7,958 for Marconi v Parramatta at Parramatta Stadium (1990/91).

QUALIFYING FINAL: 10,446 for Sydney Olympic v South Melbourne at Parramatta Stadium (1991/92).

MINOR SEMI FINAL: 11,230 for Marconi v S.Olympic at St George Stadium (1985 Nth Div).

MAJOR SEMI FINAL: 14,048 for Melbourne CSC v South Melbourne at Olympic Park (1991/92).

PRELIMINARY FINAL: 11,507 for Adelaide City v South Melbourne at Hindmarsh Stadium (1990/91)

GRAND FINAL: 26,352 for Marconi v Sydney Olympic at Parramatta (1989/90)*

* This is the all-time best CCSL crowd.

1979, and St George in 1982. From 1984 until 1986, when the league was split into two conferences, the CCSL finally went the way of public opinion and the league title went the way of the eventual double-legged grand final winner.

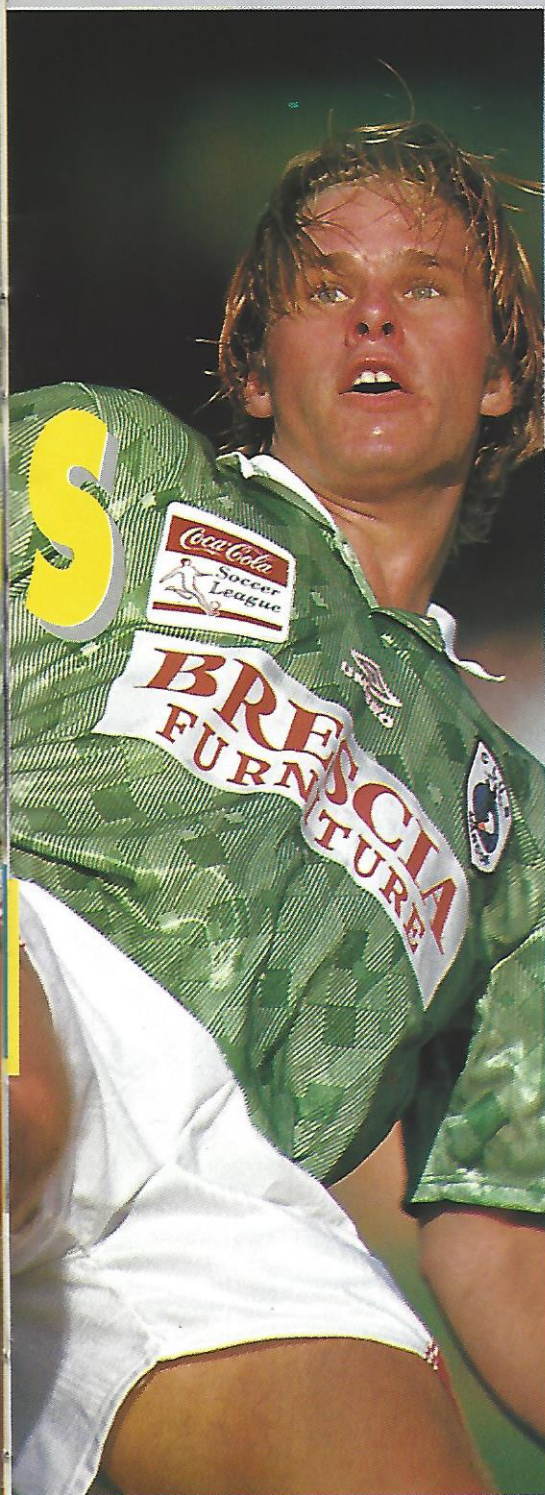

The play-offs proved an overwhelming success in those years, with record crowds flocking to finals in Melbourne, Sydney and Adelaide.

The play-off system adopted was identical to that used by the NSW Rugby League and the old VFL, and fans voted with their feet and turned the finals series into a rousing success. When the CCSL reverted to a single division in 1987 it decided to revert to

FINALS RECORDS

SCORES : Pre 1984, under the old play-off systems, the highest score recorded in a final was a 6-2 win by Heidelberg against Brisbane City in a 1979 semi-final. This remains the biggest score in post-season history.

Other pre-1984 efforts include Heidelberg 4 - South Melbourne 1 (1980), Heidelberg 4 - Sydney City 0 (1980) and Sydney City 3 - St George 0 (1982).

Since 1984 the scoring records in finals are -

ELIMINATION FINAL: Brisbane Lions 4 - Brunswick Juventus 2 (1984 Sth Div).

QUALIFYING FINAL: South Melbourne 4 - Adelaide City 2 (1990/91).

MINOR SEMI FINAL: Brunswick Juventus 2 - Heidelberg 0 (1985 Sth Div) and Melbourne City 2 - Sunshine GC 0 (1986 Sth Div).

MAJOR SEMI FINAL: St George 3 - Sydney CSC 0 (1986 Nth Div).

PRELIMINARY FINAL: Sydney Olympic 3 - Apia 0 (1984 Nth Div).

GRAND FINAL: St George 4 - Apia 0 (1987) *

* Note that the 1987 grand final DID NOT decide the championship of that season.

FINALS FACTS

• To the end of the 1991/92 and CCSL season 20 different clubs had managed an appearance in CCSL post-season play. Marconi's 11 finals series is the current record.

Other teams to play in the finals are - South Melbourne (8 times), Sydney City (7), Sydney Olympic (7), Heidelberg (6), Melbourne Croatia (6), St George (5), Sydney Croatia (4), Adelaide City (4), Brunswick Juventus (3), Preston (3), Wollongong City (3) and Apia (2), with Brisbane City, Blacktown, Brisbane Lions, Melbourne City, West Adelaide, Sunshine GC and Melita Eagles all having managed one crack at the play-offs.

• There have been 98 NSL finals matches played and a total of 290 goals scored in open play during those games.

• Marconi is the only team to have appeared in three successive grand finals and one of only two clubs to win the grand final the hard way by coming from the elimination final in 1988, coming from fourth on the ladder, a feat repeated by Adelaide City last season.

Sydney Olympic went one better than that, coming from fifth to take the major prize in 1989/90.

• Only two teams have won the minor premiership and then gone on to take off the grand final in the same season, South Melbourne in 1984 and Marconi in 1989.

• Since 1984 only six different venues have been used for finals games, with Olympic Park having hosted 33 play-off games, St George Stadium 23, Parramatta 12, Marconi 5, Hindmarsh Stadium 5 and Sydney Croatia's Sports Centre one only.

• Of the 98 finals games played since 1977, only 26 have gone into extra time.

Thirteen of those 23 games were decided in penalty shoot-outs, with the record a 7-6 marathon as Marconi rolled Olympic in the 1985 Northern Division Minor Semi Final.

• The highest aggregate score for a finals match since 1984 was in the classic 1985 Southern Division Preliminary Final when the lead changed three times as South Melbourne and Preston fought out a 4-4 draw.

• The Marston Medal, awarded to the best-on-ground in the grand final, was first awarded in 1989/90, with the inaugural winner Sydney Olympic's Abbas Saad.

Losing Melbourne CSC skipper Jo Biskic won the medal the following year, with Adelaide City skipper Alex Tobin taking the honours last year.

• Current Parramatta Eagles veteran Marshall Soper holds the record for the most goals scored in finals matches which counted for the championship (ie 1984 - 1986, 1988 - 1991/92). Soper has scored six when it has counted, one more than David Lowe, Zlatko Nasteovski, Charlie Egan and Frank Farina.

first-past-the-post, and with that Apia ran away with the title and the crowds stayed away in droves.

Since the 1988 winter season the single division CCSL has utilised the traditionally Australian final five series with resounding success and the league has now adopted a final six for the 1992/93 play-offs.

COCA-COLA SOCCER LEAGUE TOP SIX CHAMPIONSHIP SERIES

HOW IT WORKS

The Coca-Cola Championship showdown this season will be a Top Six series with the first round played on a home and away basis. The system works as follows:

WEEK ONE: SUNDAY 25 APRIL, 1993

Three first leg matches to be played on this day:

MATCH

A-1	1st Place	v	2nd Place
B-1	3rd Place	v	5th Place
C-1	4th Place	v	6th Place

Teams One, Three and Four will play first games at home.

WEDNESDAY 28 APRIL, 1993

The second leg matches to be played are:

B-2	5th Place	v	3rd Place **
C-2	6th Place	v	4th Place **

Teams Five and Six will play at their home ground. The eventual losers are eliminated from the Top Six series.

** Please note that if the aggregate scores are level at the conclusion of normal time in the second game, then the match shall be decided by the goals score away from home counting as double. If the aggregate still remains level, then extra time consisting of 2 x 15 minute halves will take place. A penalty shoot-out will take place if the score is still level at the end of extra time.

WEEK TWO: SUNDAY 2 MAY, 1993

The Minor Semi-Final (Match "D") will be played between the two winners of the "E" Semi-Finals and will revert to a single game on a knock out basis. The winner advances to the Preliminary Final, whilst the loser is eliminated.

WEEK THREE: SUNDAY 8 MAY, 1993

WEEK FOUR: SUNDAY 16 MAY, 1993

The Grand Final, Match "F" is a single game with the eventual winner being crowned the CHAMPION of the COCA-COLA Soccer League.

NATIONAL YOUTH LEAGUE 1992-93

For the first time the finals series in the National Youth League will involve three divisions, the Northern, the Southern and the South Australian. As expected, the last of these turned out to be a two-horse race between Adelaide City and West Adelaide, with West Adelaide winning the play-off by three goals to one. ROY HAY presents an overall assessment of the NYL situation

The Southern Division of the National Youth League produced one of the most exciting finishes to the home and away series in recent years with the Minor Premiership and two of the places in the top four in doubt to the very last round. South Melbourne defeated Altona Gate by five goals to one in its final match to claim the Premiership, as its nearest rival Melbourne CSC could only draw one-all away to Morwell Falcons. Heidelberg United made sure of its play off spot by downing Sunshine George Cross by five goals to nil. This left the last place to be contested by Preston and the Victorian Institute of Sport, taking part for the first time under the expert guidance of Ernie Merrick and Ian Greener. A moment of brilliance by Young Soccerroo Vasco Trpcevski produced the only goal and gave Preston the final spot.

In the Northern Division, Ron Smith's lads from the Australian Institute of Sport made all the running, assisted by a phenomenal goal scoring run by Mark Viduka. Viduka went on to play a few games for Melbourne CSC in the Coca-Cola Soccer League, showing that he could score at that level too. The AIS finished six points clear of Sydney CSC, last year's National Youth League champions, with Parramatta Eagles a further six points behind. Sydney Olympic made up the top four, nine points ahead of the pack. In the finals series, the Divisional champions of the Southern and South Australian Divisions will play off, with the winner of that match playing the Northern champions for the right to be called the best Youth team in the tree South Eastern States. In the year in which the Australian Youth Team has done the country proud, it is important to realise what a depth of talent there is at this level throughout the country. Perhaps before too long the representatives of the other states will be able to join this carnival of soccer.

Les MURRAY

If you don't know Les Murray you don't know soccer in more than a decade, has an intimate knowledge of the is recognised world-wide for his expertise in the field. the success of the recent World Youth Championships

There is a warm inner glow when dreams and predictions coincide.

Last month's World Youth Championship suggested thrills, spills, goals of great spectacle and enterprising, flash football. We optimists believed it and we were right. We said the assembly was going to be one of superb teams and superb young players whose youthful naivety would override their fledgling kink for expediency and pragmatism and it all proved to be true. Ghana did so well with their special brand of teenage exuberance and the adolescent belief that if you are brave enough to have a go then you are indestructible. It simply doesn't happen in "adult" football. Most of the media coverage of the tournament, rightly, concentrated on the Coca-Cola Young Socceroos and a fabulous fortnight they had too. But in the excitement over our own kids, the high quality of football exhibited in the entire tournament was scarcely analysed. I believe this was the best, in football terms, of all the World Youth Championships to date and quite a lot better than most senior World Cups. The quality of the goals alone tell the story. At SBS we had laughingly given ourselves the chore of picking the best goals from the first week. It turned out to be like trying to pick a beauty queen from a parade of a hundred Elle MacPhersons. Colleague Johnny Warren, the chief judge, threw his hands in the air suggesting we simply delete own goals and penalties and include the rest. Perhaps apart from the unfortunate Turkey, who succumbed to the pressures of fan adulation, and survival into the quarters deserved some sort of trophy for gallantry, Saudi Arabia, England, the USA and Korea. Norway showed patches of quality, although dreadful in front of goal, as did the Germans whom, as an Australian, I feared most as a quarter-final foe. To the quarter-finals, 60 goals were scored at an average of 2.5 per game - a seven per cent rise on Portugal '91. Again, in an age when defenders continue to be more efficient and watchful, the new back-pass rule must take some of the credit for an increase in scoring chances. In keeping Cameroon in their first two games, the other teams managed champagne football at least in patches. Ghana, for mine, took the cake, along with Australia, Uruguay, Mexico and Brazil, once their samba got going. There was also splendid stuff from Russia, whose very with the high standards was the refereeing. They issued 103 yellow cards and three reds before the quarter-finals - an average of 4.5 cards per game - but that should not be misinterpreted. It was due not to indiscipline but to unprecedented vigilance by the referees. Far from criticising them for being "card happy", I congratulate them. Largely because of them, it was not a dirty tournament. And as beautiful as anything about the championship was the continuing evidence that football's developing world is developing faster than most think. At this level the soccer world is a very level playing field, indeed! Of the last eight only half - Brazil, Russia, England and Uruguay - were from the world's so called football elite. Australia, Ghana, the USA and even Mexico are emerging forces. Then Uruguay went out and only two traditional powers, Brazil and England, were left. Look at the giants that fell early. Germany, holders Portugal and European champions Turkey. So a tip for the tipsters. When predicting future youth champions, discard any prejudices based on status at senior World Cup level. And a word or two on the crowds which, much to my dismay, were criticised in some quarters. Some twit at a news conference apparently implied that the 32,000 that attended the opening game was a disappointing figure. Let's not forget that this was a youth tournament. And youth tournaments in any other sport would be lucky to attract 300 fans. Who indeed has heard of 18,000 fans turning up to watch a match on a video screen, as happened when Australia's quarter-final was beamed back to Sydney? Not to mention that through television, and the record ratings for SBS in Australia, many millions were reached - 3.4 million and 35 per cent of all homes in the first week - and many people converted to the sport itself. The organisers, the Australian Soccer Federation, FIFA, the Sydney 2000 people and soccer fans generally are smiling today. The 1993 World Youth Championship for the FIFA/Coca-Cola Cup, from every angle, was an unqualified success.

O.K so I am a fan of AC Milan, but then again I prefer Moët to Lambrusco, Elle MacPherson to Roseanne Barr and Pavarotti to Kylie Minogue (wine, women and song!).

It's easy to see they are great because of Berscullini's wealth (and how many Presidents are as well known as his players) but that is too simple. Football cannot just be bought. That is why the game has its roots in the slums of world cities. That is also why Africa, South America and Australia can create great players and maybe if wealth was the ultimate criteria, New York or Tokyo would have the best teams in the world. To try to explain their success I think we should divide their game into the major areas recommended by FIFA.

TACTICAL

Despite all their individual flair AC Milan are very organised and play to strict tactical roles. Hans Van Breukelen the goalkeeper of PSV Eindhoven (Milan's opponents in the European cup final group stage and team mate of Van Basten, Gullit and Rijkaard in the Dutch National team) states: "AC Milan all play the system. It doesn't matter who comes in or who goes out, even with the foreigners. It's always the same system and they all put their talent and ability at the service of the system and the team. That's what real star quality means".

Unlike most modern teams who play with 3 or 5 at the back, AC Milan play a classic 4-4-2, the line up depending on the strength of the fixture of the availability of the three foreigners (from the six they have).

Surprisingly I believe that the key to their success is their method of defending. Their style is a total defence similar to the total football of Holland in the 1970's. At every opportunity Baresi brings the back four up the pitch and either catches the opposition offside, or more often squeezes the space the opponents have to play in. Watch when an opposition defender gets the ball. One player immediately stops the defender running out quickly and then the other players arrive in numbers to "ambush" them. This tactic has particularly improved due to the new pass back rule which meant the easy option to the keeper is no longer available. Also if you watch closely, Van Basten and Papin defend very intelligently by allowing the defender to pass to his keeper.

This style of play forces opposing teams to lose the ball early and also does not allow them to settle into a team pattern of play.

When they attack, the key to their success is the number of runs which the 2 strikers make allowing mid-fielders to attack the space that the strikers have made by dragging defenders away.

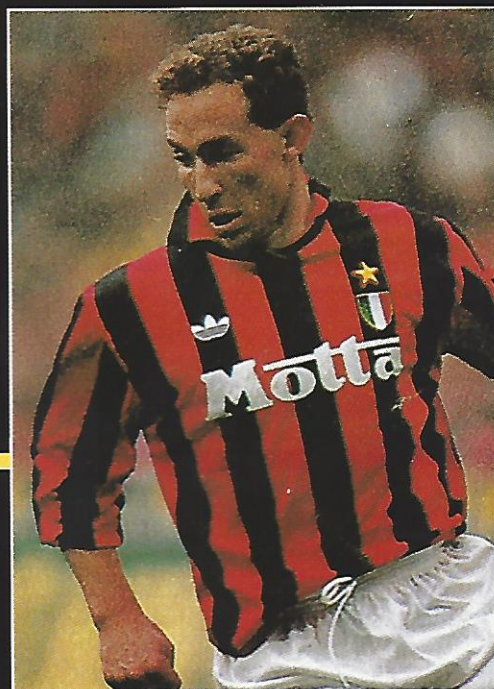

AC Milan tend to score from either accurate long balls to strikers who have a one on one, or from crosses from full backs to oncoming mid-fielders/strikers.

PHYSIOLOGICAL

To sustain the total football or pressure defence of the AC Milan style, all players have to be supreme physical specimens and have the mental attitude to understand that they must run and chase to squeeze down opponents' space. It is essential that not only do the players have a high aerobic capacity, but they also have speed which is repeatable through the whole of the game. The days of the "one paced" strolling playmaker are gone at this level.

TECHNIQUE

If you can't control a ball or pass it then it doesn't matter what system you play or how fit you are. It goes without saying that all the AC Milan players are superb technically. They not only have great techniques but are skilful. That means they can select the right technique to use at the right time and at great speed.

AC Milan use frequently the often maligned long ball. However, the ball is not just "wellied" up front, but hit beyond defenders for the strikers to run onto.

COACHING

Fabio Capello has to be a great coach. The reason I say this is that he firstly has the man management skills to keep 20 star players happy. In Italy there is no reserve team and despite all the financial incentives, footballers want to play. So far any internal dissent has either not happened or has been kept quiet. Also a classic example of his coaching was in the game against Roma when Baresi was sent off early. Capello quickly replaced Papin, and played with a lone striker who had the ability to hold the ball in possession and allow the mid-field to support. Not only did he do this, but he alternated the lone striker (Lentini and Gullit) so that they could have "rest" periods. This type of decision takes bravery (to pull off Papin) and a quick, tactically analytical mind.

The question is now being asked, was he the brains behind Saachi? Though one cannot underestimate the philosophical influence Saachi has made on the Italian game.

CONCLUSION

Wealth, great players, disciplined coaching and superb training facilities all combine to form the team that AC Milan are. However, the added ingredients which make this team (in my opinion) the greatest club team ever, are that they have 3 special players. Van Basten the goal machine. Rijkaard the total footballer who plays everywhere. And, to me, their greatest player, Baresi.

Not only can he sweep, defend and organise, but he keeps them going by constantly urging and supporting. Without Baresi (at either AC Milan or Italy level) Constacurta looks vulnerable. Without Baresi AC Milan and Italy look vulnerable.

The great run has to end one day, but what great pleasure they are giving to everybody who loves the game in the meantime.

Australia has a long and hard road ahead of it to make it to the 1994 World Cup and while many may believe otherwise, the next step is far from easy says PETER DESIRA, soccer writer for the Melbourne Herald-Sun

New Zealand has eliminated Australia in two out of the past three World Cups. That chilling statement should be more than enough warning to anyone who has been thinking beyond Australia's next step in the 1994 World Cup qualifiers.

Everyone seems to acknowledge that Australia's Socceroos have been given a rough and tough road to make it to the United States next June but the general impression has been that the real hurdles are still a fair way away, with most soccer pundits thinking to the play-offs against a Central American country (out of Mexico, Canada, El Salvador and Honduras) and the real crunch against a South American nation (out of Argentina, Colombia, Peru and Paraguay).

The Socceroos have so far disposed of the Solomon Islands and Tahiti in convincing fashion. But contrary to general belief the Oceania section is no cakewalk when you invariably have to dispose of the All Whites.

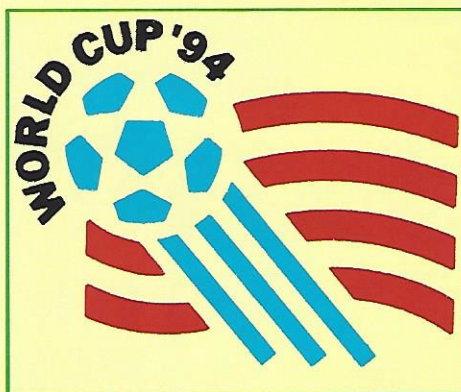

Australia has certainly overshadowed NZ at junior, youth and Olympic level but in the seniors, it's a different story. The matches between the Socceroos and the Kiwis have invariably turned into very tight affairs regardless of the apparent difference in standards at club level.

No one put the matter better than NZ international striker Billy Wright, who has already scored two goals in this World Cup qualifying campaign.

"In matches between Australia and NZ, preparation or form or calibre of players counts for nothing. It always comes down to the team that wants to win more on the day," Wright said.

While the public seems to have the incorrect view, there are no illusions in the Socceroo camp and that is reflected by how seriously the Australian Soccer Federation and national coach Eddie Thomson have treated the two matches. The ASF and Thomson wanted the matches to be played in May and June to improve the chances of getting Australia's overseas-based players.

BEWARE

Apart from organising tours against Sweden and Croatia, the ASF has spent big portions of its hard earned money to send the national team on a tour of North and South America and organised training camps in Australia as well as in Europe to do its utmost to prepare the team for the big derby.

Thomson has been working overtime to keep in touch with the expatriates and find out about their availability while the ASF says it will call upon the might of FIFA, soccer's world governing body to ensure the players are released regardless of their duties at club level in various parts of Europe.

All players realise the enormity of the task ahead but none more so than Socceroo skipper Paul Wade, who has already been involved in 12 encounters against the Kiwis in an international career which began in 1985.

"Victories over New Zealand are anything but inevitable," Wade said.

"I'm under no illusion about the big job ahead but some of the clubs in Australia certainly seem to think it's going to be easy with the way the reluctance they've shown to release players for training camps.

"The preparation so far has been far from ideal with a lot of chopping and changing - if we don't get our act together real quick, we could be made the laughing stock of the soccer world. "I clearly remember that day when they beat us 0-2 in the last World Cup qualifiers (in 1989 in Auckland).

"They scored two excellent goals but more importantly they sat back and defended and we could have played for another two days without being able to break them down.

"Once they get the sniff of a lead, they camp in their own half.

"In matches between Australia and NZ, you're going to get chances at both ends but if they take theirs first, it's going to be an uphill battle - their defence is always so tough to break down. If they have to chase us it's a different story."

Part of the reason for the expectations of a comfortable Australian win stems from the quality of players Australia is producing.

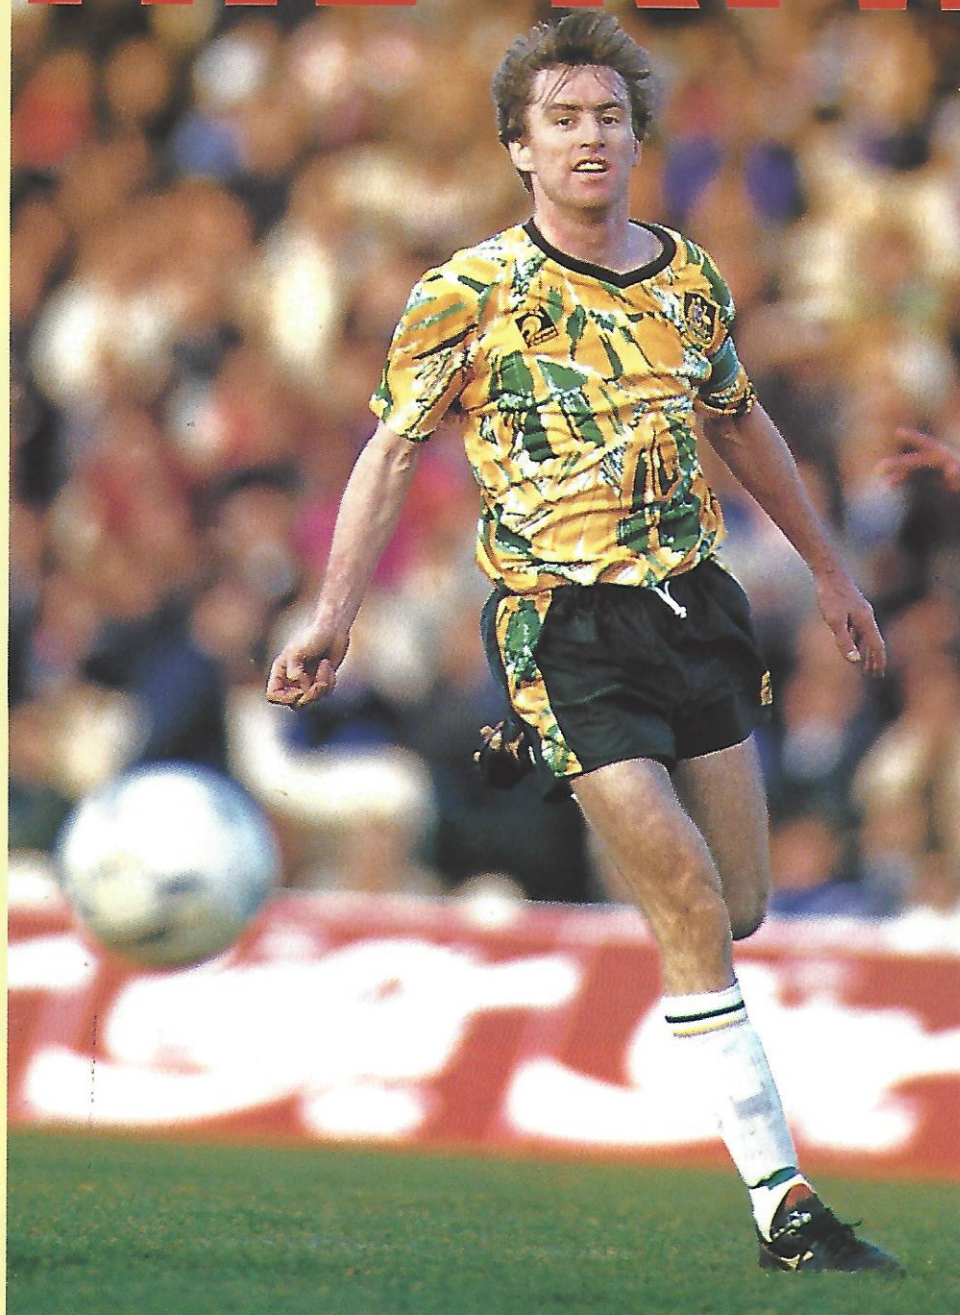

It's not only Australia that thinks it has good players - the steady trickle of players leaving to sign for overseas clubs suggests that Europe is starting to recognise the talent.

Ned Zelic has gone to Borussia Dortmund and has nailed down a regular spot in the senior side despite tough opposition from internationals. Frank Farina has rediscovered his scoring form at Strasbourg in France and Robbie Slater is one of the cornerstones of the Lens team also in France. In Belgium, Aurelio Vidmar has been knocking in goals galore at Waregem, while Graham Arnold has slotted in well at FC Liege after a close season transfer from Dutch club Roda.

Paul Wade . . . victories over New Zealand are anything but inevitable

THE KIWIS

In England, Mark Bosnich has stepped up to become the first choice keeper at title chasing Aston Villa, while Vlado Bozinovski (Ipswich), David Mitchell (Swindon), Ernie Tapai (Stoke) and Shaun Murphy (Notts County) have been regulars with their clubs. However what seems to be getting forgotten is that New Zealand has made similar progress and you need look no further than Wynton Rufer, who has won championships and European honors with his German club Werder Bremen.

The likes of Ceri Evans and Zoricic are similarly regulars in England. Moreover the significant players in the All Whites team - Robert Ironside, Clint Gosling, Danny Halligan, Billy Wright and Vaughan Coveny - are playing on a weekly basis in Australia in the Coca-Cola Soccer League and will be anything but overawed by the job ahead.

While the quality of players will be there, Paul Wade issued another warning about what to expect in the two matches.

"Derbies generally are not great matches to watch - It's win at all costs and football takes second place. Sometimes the quality deteriorates when there is that much at stake," Wade said.

"That is why I hope that Australian fans are patient and get behind the team especially in the all-important second leg in Melbourne."

The two teams rounded off their preparation by accepting invitations to go to Asia.

The Socceroos took on Kuwait in a two match series in Singapore, while the Kiwis played against Saudi Arabia. Kuwait and Saudi were preparing for their own World Cup qualifiers. The two countries are in Asian group E with Malaysia and Macao and the first half of the group matches were played in Malaysia between May 1 and 5.

The practice games gave the national coaches of Australia and NZ, Eddie Thomson and Ian Marshall a chance to spy on each other. We shall soon see how much they learned about each other.

Simon Pickering, our European correspondent, talks to Ernie Tapai about his bid to join the Socceroos in the World Cup . . .

AUSSIE international Ernie Tapai is fired up and ready to help the Coca-Cola Socceroos to World Cup glory after a frustrating start to his professional career with Stoke City in England.

Work permit and immigration problems complicated Tapai's arrival at the Midlands club, while the team's table topping performances in the second division have continued to keep him out of the starting line-up.

Tapai, at 25 a veteran of eight years in the CCSL with Footscray JUST, Sunshine George Cross and Adelaide City, however, remains confident he has the ability to win a regular place for the final games of Stoke City's title bid. Indeed, he recently indicated to club manager Lou Macari that he was now settled, match fit and ready for first team action. The popular midfielder's move to Stoke City began in September 1992, overlapping with his involvement with the World Cup qualifiers against Tahiti and the Solomon Islands.

Former Arsenal favourite Frank McLintock helped organise a two-week trial for Tapai at the Potteries club during which time he did enough to earn a contract through until June 1994. But despite having played over 20 full internationals for Australia, the English footballing authorities remained extremely reluctant to issue a work permit to Tapai.

"Even with everything set up, the PFA (Professional Footballer's Association) rejected my application, but fortunately the Home Office accepted it," Tapai said. "They certainly don't seem to like foreigners coming over here."

And Tapai's problems weren't restricted solely to obtaining a work permit.

Returning to England after fixing up his personal affairs in Australia, Tapai and his wife Stella found they had virtually been locked out of the country.

"We came back to England ready to stay here, but when I told the immigration officials my work permit was still being processed they wouldn't let us into the country," Tapai said.

"They were going to send us straight back on the plane after a 22 hour flight." Finally, after 6-7 hours at the airport

TAPAI READY TO TAME THE KIWI

Tapai, through his barrister, was able to negotiate a temporary visa that needed to be renewed every couple of days.

After all the complications, it was with a great deal of relief that Tapai eventually received his work permit, clearing him to at last commence professional duties, two days before Christmas.

By this time, however, Stoke City was firmly established at the top of the Second Division. The club was in the middle of a 25-game unbeaten run, was competing without any injury or suspension worries and had added to an already large squad. It is these factors which have continued to frustrate Tapai's first team ambitions.

So far, Tapai's duties have been restricted to reserve team fixtures and a few substitute appearances. His only significant appearance so far has been 20 minutes in an Autoglass Trophy match against Crewe Alexandra. Despite winning good press reviews after that match, however, manager Macari indicated to Tapai that he still lacked the fitness for English League football. Macari's comments underline his fitness-first style of football management - a style that Tapai is still adjusting to. "The squad will probably be on the track 3-4 days/week doing a hell of a lot of running, probably more so than just about any club in England," Tapai said. "Since I've been here I've worn out three pairs of trainers, but haven't yet worn out any football boots."

And having compared the English second division with Australia's CCSL, Tapai believes it is this professional training regime that would probably give an English league club the edge in any showdown with an antipodean opponent. This is despite the fact he feels the Australian game is in front when it comes to skills.

Ernie Tapai at Stoke City

"The simple fact is that Australian football is a lot more skilful than the English second division, particularly a team like my old club Adelaide City," Tapai said.

"At the same time these guys are very good at what they do. They get fit, a lot fitter than any club in Australia because they are professionals, they run all day and they create a lot of opportunities." Despite manager Macari's early reservations, Tapai now believes he is fit and ready to make a contribution to Stoke's title challenge. Indeed, he would rather move to another club than continue to warm the bench at the Victoria Ground. Tapai has already put the feelers out to gauge the reaction of other European clubs if he were available, and it appears there would be a number of interested teams. He would probably favour a move to the continent, because of its greater commitment to skills-based football.

And although a season in England hasn't brought many playing opportunities for Tapai, it has taught him some valuable lessons about succeeding as a professional sportsman.

"This sort of thing is not based solely on footballing ability a lot of the time, but on mental strength," Tapai said.

"You see people who have been very good players in Australia who haven't been able to adjust to playing in Europe, while some others who might not have the same ability who have done really well."

Tapai would like to play out his career in Europe, hopefully another five or six years. But wherever his professional career takes him. Tapai is already convinced that moving overseas was the right option. Indeed, the decision to make soccer his full-time career was prompted by the incompatibility of working and national duty with the Coca-Cola Socceroos.

"I've been in the national squad for the last six years and with all the travelling involved I've lost 3.5 jobs during that period - it's been virtually impossible to keep a full-time job," he said.

"So when the opportunity arose here to play professionally I thought I should come here to make my living. Basically, I had to choose between a job and the national team and I didn't want to make that choice."

It is that commitment that has made Tapai such a vital contributor to the Coca-Cola Socceroos in the past six seasons and should again see him on duty in the upcoming world Cup qualifiers against New Zealand. The English season finishes on May 8, so Tapai will be available for both matches against New Zealand and his recent inclusion in the Coca-Cola Socceroos training camp in Holland indicates he remains at the forefront of coach Eddie Thomson's plans.

Tapai is looking forward to the games against the Kiwis and believes Australia should proceed untroubled.

What Australia must not do however, according to Tapai, is buy into the normal trans-Tasman rivalries.

"Really Australia shouldn't be treating these matches as derby games, everytime they do, form goes out the window and it's anybody's game," he said.

"When you look at the players Australia has produced in the last six or seven years in the national team and the results they've achieved, New Zealand should be a push over."

USE IT IN THE SUN

Summer may be over but the harmful rays that can damage the skin are forever present. Australia boasts the unenviable statistic of having the highest rate of skin cancer in the world - per capita. Ella Bache has produced a range "The Great Sports Bloc." It is ideal for active people who want complete protection from harmful UVA and UVB for up to five hours. Great Sports Bloc contains titanium dioxide, an opaque filter which actually reflects the sun giving more complete protection from UVA and infra-red. It is the most revolutionary sun-screen ingredient and is likely to become one of the most commonly used filters in the future.

Shaving made easier

Jazz pre-shaving cleansing gel, from Yves Saint Laurent, makes shaving easier because it cleans the skin and prepares the bristles. How does it work? The gel gently cleanses and purifies the skin by eliminating excess sebum. This allows clean action by the razor by encapsulating molecules of water in the filaments of keratin contained in the bristles, thus increasing their volume and rigidity. Recommended retail price is $36.
